

“What one man ignores another man knows. What is not known in one country is in another, and all the knowledge available to man would be simultaneously possessed if all human interests were free to cross together into speculation or to act in its light.”

Dante Alighieri

(Dante imagines the Internet?)